Speaker: Christina Thompson, Director of Social Services at Indian Oaks Living Center

Topic: Dementia – is the loss of cognitive (thinking) function. It is an overall term that describes a wide range of symptoms. Most well known are Alzheimer’s Disease, Vascular Dementia and Frontotemporal Dementia, Dementia with Lewy Bodies, Parkinson’s Disease, and Huntington’s Disease. For complete descriptions of these disorders go to www.Dementia.org. There is no single test that can conclusively diagnose most dementias. A thorough medical examination is needed, neurological evaluations and cognitive testing are used in diagnosing dementia. Alzheimer’s disease is conclusively diagnosed post- mortem where they can see the brain had plaques and tangles.

FYI: Medal of Honor Education

Submitted by: Jos Portmann

Retired Capt. Gary M. Rose, a U.S. Army Vietnam War veteran, is being awarded the Medal of Honor, the nation's highest award for valor, from President Donald J. Trump during a White House ceremony today at 3:00 p.m. EST.

Rose, a Special Forces medic in Military Assistance Command Vietnam-Studies and Observations Group, 5th Special Forces Group, is receiving the award for his actions during combat operations, Sept. 11-14, 1970, near Chavane, Laos.

Rose, as part of a company-sized exploitation force that was inserted 70 kilometers inside the enemy-controlled territory, displayed the attributes of a professional Soldier and embodied the Warrior Ethos during Operation Tailwind.

During the four-day mission, Rose repeatedly ran into the line of fire to provide critical medical aid to the wounded and help defend the unit's positions. Rose used his own body to shield a wounded American from harm. On the final day of the mission, although severely wounded himself, Rose volunteered to board the last extraction helicopter.

Shortly after lift-off, the helicopter was hit by enemy anti-aircraft. Rose rendered lifesaving medical treatment to save a wounded Marine before the helicopter crashed. Ignoring his own injuries Rose pulled the people from the burning helicopter and provided medical aid until help arrived.

Despite the many wounded, only three men died during this operation. Rose is credited with treating 60-70 wounded personnel and saving many lives.
